

Country/City Chapter Application Form

About us: Cities4Children - The Global Alliance

Cities4Children - The Global Alliance was launched at the World Urban Forum in 2020 and currently comprises 27 member organisations. You can find all the information about us here Home - Cities4Children. Save the Children's Urban Hub, located in Switzerland, manages Cities4Children.

Cities4Children was established to tackle the huge challenges and numerous issues faced by children living in urban areas, especially the most marginalized. We believe that together we will achieve greater collective impact and influence, we will be able to encourage country and city-level collaboration, and will have a louder voice with joint advocacy and communications geared to change the narrative that urban areas and cities should be better for children's health, rights and wellbeing.

Our membership's expertise covers a range of topics relevant to child and youth wellbeing and their rights in urban areas such as health, education, nutrition, housing, safety, the environment, public space, urban planning, street design, road safety, air pollution, play, active mobility, cycling, safety for girls, early childhood care and development, youth development, humanitarian response.

What is this application about?

At the World Urban Forum in June 2022 in Poland, we launched the process to set up country/city chapters of this alliance. We organised a workshop and ran an online survey to gather inputs about how this would work best. Based on this input, we prepared this application form.

If you submit this application form, then you are applying to set up and convene a local chapter of the alliance. This chapter can either operate on a city level or can also be for the whole country. We seek partners who have the needed experience and resources to start this process in African, Asian, and Latin American countries.

Why set up a Cities4Children local (country/city) level alliance?

A country/city level alliance has the potential to:

- Collaborate with like-minded organisations to co-create and innovate.
- Achieve collective impact and a greater influence by working in partnership with other organisations and their strengths, networks and resources.
- Influence urban policy and development agendas in your city/country through the entry point of addressing issues relevant to children and youth.
- Support and coordinate with urban policy makers to improve cities and neighbourhoods to enhance the wellbeing of children
- Implement pilot projects focused on children's wellbeing in cities.
- Provide knowledge and expertise to local and city-wide governments.
- Facilitate access to funding opportunities - because donors are more likely to support multi-stakeholder and multi neighbourhood/city proposals with possibilities of scaling-up.

- Exchange Knowledge and learning: Learn from good practices from other organisations and cities across the globe, replicate and scale-up successful approaches in your city/country.
- Connect to global networks and establish country/city level collaboration.
- Collaborate on joint advocacy and communications to make young people’s issues visible and to influence the agenda that urban areas need to be better for children and young people.
- Conduct joint research and fill knowledge gaps about the situation of children and youth in your city/country.
- Connect researchers and practitioners in your context.
- Support existing promising initiatives by young people and co-create with them.

What we expect from organisations

The organisations selected to partner with Cities4Children in their countries are broadly expected to carry out some of these ideas and activities below. Applicants should propose what is suitable and realistic to do in their context in the first 2 years.

1. Organise

- Assign a focal point for coordination and communication with the secretariat and members of Cities4Children.
- Define a broad workplan for two years, a detailed plan for the first year.
- Plan to apply for/allocate funding to carry out this work.

2. Research

- On cities and young people: Conduct research on the situation of urban children in your country/city. This will initially include a review of the literature in your context and could include primary research where gaps are identified. This is to define what is most needed to improve the rights, health, and wellbeing of children growing up in cities in your country.
- On Stakeholders: Conduct a mapping and analysis of stakeholders focused on children/ youth in urban areas in the local and/or national context. This will include different types of stakeholders working on diverse topics of relevance. Topics could include health, education, nutrition, housing, safety, nature, the environment, urban planning, street design, road safety, air pollution, slum upgrading, etc... Stakeholders can be from academia, civil society, professional networks, private and public sectors. They can include active parents' groups, youth groups/councils, school authorities, transportation planners, teachers, networks of architects/urban planners/placemakers, government ministries, etc.
- Select, adapt, translate and localize Cities4Children resources: Familiarize yourself with the research series, blogs and publications of Cities4Children and our members. Select those of most relevance to translate, adapt and publish in your local language.

3. Convene, Connect & Facilitate Collaboration

- Bring together key urban child/youth focused stakeholders and organise regular meetings and dialogues in country/city.
- Select key thematic areas to focus on informed by the research carried out, the most pressing needs of children, the readiness and willingness of diverse stakeholders to collaborate and the availability of funding. This could range from a focus on health in cities, road safety, slum upgrading, air quality, water, sanitation, urban planning, public space, safe/active journeys to school, amongst others.
- Engage the relevant authorities.

4. Develop skills and competencies and a community of practice

- Identify needed technical competencies to carry out planned work.

- Organise training events in country for different stakeholders with support from and in collaboration with Cities4Children Global Alliance partners

5. Communicate and Advocate for Cities4Children

- Carry our regular communications and awareness campaigns around issues facing children growing up in urban contexts, on social media and in collaboration with local media. Cities4Children has a lot of material to support this work.
- Build an online and social media presence to amplify the issues, solutions and voices of children and young people.

6. Innovate and implement for and with Children and Young people

Young people are full of energy and great ideas. They are resourceful and digitally skilled. We expect you to actively engage with them, consult them, provide them with a safe space to share and develop their ideas, and support them to campaign, advocate and implement their ideas and projects. Where possible you should facilitate pathways for them to engage in local urban planning and governance.

Who can apply?

This application is open to any type of organisation that is based in cities in Africa, Asia and Latin America: thinktanks, CSOs, NGOs, university departments, etc. In this phase we are not accepting applications from other regions. Organisations that apply must have 1) a formal registration 2) have expertise and past projects on any of the relevant thematic areas
